Sebastian de Assis: rEvolution in Education

Posing that the problems of our educational system are a reflection of a much broader social crisis, this unique and thoughtful work offers a holistic approach to education.

Exploring social reform through educational practices, de Assis argues for a new education paradigm in which the hub of the educational wheel is the individual human, instead of the individual laborer. Administrators and teachers will want to delve into these ideas because they offer not only a cure for the ills of the education system, but also provide a beacon of hope to a world in chaos. de Assis is an educator, writer and speaker with more than 23 years of professional experience in education. He has taught from first grade to college level in Europe, Latin America and the United States.

Mark Armour: Paths to Glory

A wonderful opportunity for baseball fans to find out how teams are built to win!

An essential experience of being a baseball fan is the hopeful anticipation of seeing the hometown nine make a run at winning the World Series. Armour and co-author Daniel R. Levitt review how teams build themselves into winners. What makes a winning team like the 1900 Brooklyn Superbas or the 1997 Florida Marlins? And how are these teams different? What makes each championship team a unique product of its time? Armour, who lives in Corvallis and has published articles with the Society of American Baseball Research, is a Red Sox fan. He dreams of the day when he can talk about his team's path to glory.
